Training Description and Core Clinical Components:	Motivational interviewing, a treatment approach developed by William Miller, has been well established as an effective way to promote behavior change in individuals. This day-and-a-half course requires previous training and experience using motivational interviewing. It will provide in depth instruction, practice and feedback on fostering and utilizing change talk to increase client motivation and movement toward change across all health, mental health and substance use conditions. Significant time will be devoted to “real play” practice to enable participants to gain skills necessary to elicit change talk from clients with low levels of readiness for change, thereby increasing levels of motivation and moving them toward action to address their health-related issues.
Important Note regarding Previous MI Training and Experience	This advanced course requires either participation in a previous DMH sponsored Motivational Interviewing training (schedules and registration can be found on the DMH Training Site) or completion of the online Tour of MI course (http://tinyurl.com/hbenh3g). Please note: This training is only appropriate for people who have previous training experience and have used motivational interviewing skills in a clinical setting. Participants who need introductory-level training should access the resources described above before registering for the Advanced MI Academy.
Learning Objectives:	At the conclusion of the 1.5-day MI Academy, participants will be able to: (1) Explain how the three components of motivational interviewing (MI) “Spirit (evocation, collaboration, autonomy/support) can be used to solicit client motivation; (2) Identify at least three examples of change and sustain talk in consumer statements; (3) Demonstrate how the Motivational Interviewing Treatment Integrity Scale (MITI) can be used when listening to a therapist/counselor work with a consumer; and (4) Describe at least two ways to respond to sustain talk.
